requires a major in nursing. The program requires a total of about 35 hours of pre-licensure coursework and about 60 hours of professional practice coursework. Pre-licensure coursework is taken first with a minimum of 30 credits and a maximum of 45. The bachelor's degree in nursing offers students the opportunity to study all aspects of the nursing profession. The curriculum is designed to provide students with the preparation needed to enter the registered nurse workforce as licensed nurses. The program is a study of the human body, the chemical, organic, and physical processes of the human body, and the physiology, biochemistry, pathophysiology, and treatment of disease and dysfunction of the human body. Nurses are key care providers of a hospital or nursing home, and must be able to provide care to all members of a health care team, such as physicians, therapists, administrators, and other health care professionals. Nurse educators must be able to adapt and change the curriculum to meet the needs of the health care system. Nursing is a unique field, offering the opportunity to work in a variety of settings, at all levels of care, and in a variety of specialties. It is both an art and a science.
